Meet Your Parish

Gay Dlugosh is the leader/coordinator of one of the most vital and creative of all the liturgical ministries here at Holy Trinity. This group, formerly called the Altar Society, is better known as the Environmental Committee.

Since our assembly gathers in the presence of God, the climate of our liturgical celebrations and our worship as a community is one of mystery, wonder, thanksgiving and praise. It's amazing how they continue to be successful with decorating our church in ways that reflect these qualities and always appear to capture that which is most beautiful and that which helps us to more fully and completely enter into prayer. . Gay has been involved with the Holy Trinity Environmental Committee for over 15 years. She confided that just after she was baptized, she felt a compelling need to become more active and involved in the parish. This aspiration was fulfilled when she discovered the Environmental Committee. When the current leader needed to slow down for reasons of health, Gay willingly took on the job and has been doing wonderful and dedicated work ever since. She has conveyed that the Environment group gives her passion and love of this community a place of expression. She also stated that she has always loved flowers, is self-taught in floral arrangements, and loves working with them and truly believes that the Spirit leads her. The imagination, creativity and giftedness of many people are essential to creating a worship environment that is both hospitable and prayerful. The Holy Trinity Environmental Committee which currently consist of Jim Brandy , Erin Fend, Christi Mcneil, Tina & Tim Mahaney, Sue Jamrog, Mary Blocker, Eric & Rowena Lozados, Dennis Dlugosh, Terry & Patty Moore, and Bernie Myers, has been consistently busy beautifying our Church with flowers and displays for the altar, and banners and decorations for all. Although Holy Tinity's many ethnic and cultural groups have feasts and special masses throughout the year and do much of their own decorations in keeping with their traditions , this group is always willing to help them as they often do. Gay also wanted to share that although they do have a small budget from the Parish, they are much appreciative of the supplemented donations in the sacristan envelopes for the Environmental Committee. She is impressed and grateful that this is a very generous church.
